reference Case study cross-reference Sections H-N have similar outlines, although not every section covers every topic listed above, and some sections cover additional topics. The first three subsections define the system element described in the section, list the potential planning and preliminary engineering applications that the Guide's methods can be applied to, and list the analytical methods covered in more detail in the remainder of the section. We'll look at these methods over the next few slides. The freeway and urban street sections (and, to a lesser extent, signalized intersections) provide methods for estimating a variety of travel time reliability measures. The sections conclude with cross-references to the multimodal level of service methods for the system element in Sections O and P, and to applicable case studies in Part 4. 101 Q. Corridor Quick Estimation Screenline Analysis R. Areas and Systems Part 3 Outline Q. Corridor Quick Estimation Screenline Analysis R. Areas and Systems S. Roadway System Monitoring Part 3 contains 3 sections that extend HCM methods to the analysis of corridors, areas, and systems. Florida DOT 102 T. Case Study 1: Freeway Master Plan Part 4 Outline T. Case Study 1: Freeway Master Plan U. Case Study 2: Arterial Bus Rapid Transit Analysis V. Case Study 3: Long-Range Transportation Plan Part 4 contains 3 case studies that illustrate the application of many of the methods presented in Parts 2 and 3 of the Guide. The case studies cover the analysis of a 120-km section of freeway, a proposed new bus rapid transit route (with exclusive bus lanes) along a series of urban streets, and the application of HCM methods to a long-range transportation plan.
